A NEW THING ENTIRELY.—The most astonishing performance heard of! Barrels, firkins, kegs, and all description of cooper-work, made and finished, without a defect, air-tight; and smooth enough to varnish, entirely by machinery. The timber is taken in the bolt, the staves are sawed hollowing, and with the grain, cut of a uniform length, dressed perfectly smooth in and outside, of a uniform thickness, jointed with perfect accuracy, each having its proportionate bilge according to its width, and the strength of each fully tested; the cask is howelled, chamfered, croase cut, heads turned, and the whole prepared for the hooping process in a manner so perfect, complete, and superior a finish, that we challenge the world to produce the equal, and that at the rate of from two hundred to three hundred per day to each machine. By this process, all casks can be made, from the smallest white-lead keg, to the largest size cask in general use; all of which, can be warranted to hold the most subtle fluids, or adapted to the packing of any description of goods. In fact, the machinery cannot make an imperfect article, unless the fault is exclusively in the States of Virginia, Maryland, Kentucky, Missouri, or the eastern half of Pennsylvania, can obtain any information by applying to the subscriber at Washington City, D. C., who is sole proprietor for that portion of territory, under an assignment from Wm. Trapp, the patentee.

DROSPECTUS OF MEYER'S UNIVER-A sum—In commencing the issue of the second volume of the Universum, the publisher makes his grateful acknowledgments for the kindness of the press, and the very liberal patronage which the public have bestowed on the first. He is happy to say that the work has succeeded beyond his expectation, and that he accordingly feels himself justified in bringing it out in an improved style. It will continue to enjoy the supervision of style. It will continue to enjoy the supervision of the same editor, who will be able to devote to it a greater degree of care, and every effort will be ande to give interest and value to each number that appears. The views presented in this volume will, if possible, be more various than in the last, and the descriptive articles more attentively adapted to the wants and taste of the public.

Among other attractive plates which it will contain, are several of Central America, Australia and China, countries just now among the most and China, countries just now among the most interesting of the globe.

In order to meet a wish expressed in many quarters, the Universum will henceforth be chiefly devoted to views in foreign lands, while the scenery and public edifices of this republic will form the subject of a separate work, conducted by the same editor, to be called The United States Illustrated, which will seen make its appearance in numbers in a style of hefitting elegance, but at Mustrated, which will seem make its appearance in numbers, in a style of befitting elegance, but at a price within the means of all. For that work as well as for the Universum, the publisher hopes for a continuance of that public favor which he trusts more than ever to deserve.

The Universum will be published, as before, in twelve semi-monthly numbers, so that the second volume will be completed in December.

All subscribers to the work, whether they have paid in advance or not, will receive with the last number, as a Premium Plate, a splendid engraving representing an historical subject: The Maid of Saragossa, executed in a high style of ast.

Terms: Single copies 25 cents per number, or $3 per volume. General agent for Maryland, District of Columbia, and vicinity, Mr. John C. Gobright, No. 16, Asquith street, Baltimore, Md. The first volume of the Universum may be obtained at all booksellers.

PROSPECTUS OF THE SOUTHERN LITERARY MESSENGER for 1854. Twentieth volume. In issuing the prospectus of the Twentieth volume of the Southern Literary Messenger, the proprietors beg to assure the public that no exertions will be remitted on their part to maintain the high character of the work, and to challenge the purposes of all who value stations. maintain the high character of the work, and to challenge the patronage of all who value sterling literary merit. For nineteen years, the Messenger has endeavored to reflect faithfully the southern mind, while disdaining all narrow and sectional views, and has been alone among the monthly periodicals of America, in defence of the peculiar institutions in the southern States. To this office it will still be devoted, and will be prompt to repel assaults upon the south, whether they come under the specious garb of fiction, as in "Uncle Tom's Cabin," or in the direct form of anti-slavery namphlets. Madame Stowe. did you go Into Cornwall, down below

The green earth's surface.

Where with her face
Silver-smiling, Madame Stowe,
The moon doth never show
To those degraded, low
And wretched human beings,

And wretched duman beings. How resplendent are the seeings Of the lovely summer nights,— So affluent of delights— Madam Stowe!

Where the sun doth never shine

To thousands there, that pine
And labor in the mine
Life-long, with not a sign
Nor a thought, Medam Stowe,
Of the glorious summer day
That dawns and fades away

Unfelt by them the while, Yet blessed as Gop's smile

To the deep mine did you go

The smiling earth below, Miles under ground and damp, Madame Stowe?

Madame Stowe, did you throw

The following picture of wretchedness

One angel glance of pity,
When afoot about the city,
On those pale and ghastly weavers;
Tis famine, filth and fevers
That make them pale and ghastly,

On those Spittalfields silk-weavers!

Yet, for months, are starving quite; Men and women, lads and maidens, Whom life-long grief o'er ladens, Madame Stowe!

Robeless corpses, yet not dead, Stalled like cattle, but not fed,

Tearless, for they have shed Their last tear long since, Madame Stowe!

For years their hearts have bled,

Till they're dry Madame Stowe And no bow of promise yet In their gloomy sky is set Overhead, Madame Stowe!

Pillicoddle, after rapping the dame of Exe-ter Hall, and the lords and "brazen ladies"

Has happened, then I know You are something wiser home, and better Returned Madame Stowe!

But if it do so chance, That from England, Italy and France, Paris, London, Rome, You've come home,

You've come home, Without seeing, yes, and aiding Some soul, whose strength was fading, In the Old World's populous and reeking Hell of Sorrows, Madame Stowe! And thought how blest, beyond compare, Is the land whose name is there

Freedom's watchword, Madame Stowe And felt how foul and sad a crime

It was to daub with slime

Your country's name sublime, Madame Stowe!

If this you have not thought, And love of country brought In your bosom back Home Madame Stowe!

Then you're all over black, And the heart of woman lack,

And you aren't worth the "smack" Of Fred Douglass, Madame Stowe!

From the Louisville Journa

Such is Life.

"Tis distance lends enchantment to the view.

Man has a heart attuned to freaks of sadness, For many cherished hopes lie withered there, And memory oft recalls those days of gladness,

Which we in early youth were wont to share, And vain regrets of hours misspent will haunt us Till hope beams in the future to enchant us.

From us the dreams of youth have fled forever,

To manhood grown, we now have learned by heart

That childhood's joys, so dear, on earth will never
In life's stern autumn find their counterpart,
Yet hope to us, like weary dove returning,
Whispers the future hoards our heart's fond yearn-

The stream of life, back through the dim long past

We off review, with light and shade dispersed, its sides now dooked with flowers and now o'er

By cypress gloom, now truly blest, now curst; But as in distance earth and sky seem nearest So to our vision youthful scenes are dearest

We view, as from the slope of some high hill,
Where far outspread beneath the past appears,
Smiling in vernal green, yet loveliest still
The far off vale of youth with sunlight tinted
And the soft yelvet mead with sweet flowers printed.

The bow of promise, with its blended hues,
Caught from the glories of the setti g sun,
With wonder and delight our eye pursues
To trace its varied colors one by one,
But, should we near approach, its smiles we banish.

And hope's bright arch would into chaos vanish.

Thus is it, too, with each defect in man,

As well as in each virtue of his heart,

When after death his character we scan, From every fault released, he stands apart,

A perfect being to our spirit's vision, Though off perchance in life held in derision

So, too, the wanderer from his childhood's home

That happy group, with faces bright and glad, From whom he parted without one emotion, But now for them he yearns with love's devotio

Doth far surpass imagination's ken,
Whose joys admit no doubts or fears between,
Where disappointment ne'er can sting again.
Where hope may anchor, all for which we

When in some foreign land his heart is sad, Sees through the vista of his spirit's gloom

There is a life whose beauty, now unseen,

Be fully ours-that life belongs to heaven.

THE KNICKERBOCKER for October has been for some time on our table. This excellent magazine not only keeps up to the level of its well established character, but as it seems to us improves. It is a welcome and genial visiter. We take the following from the Editor's Table of the number before us:

"The other day, little Kitty, who with the roses opened to the sunshine of the fifth sum-mer, overheard her mother and brother speak ing of some place that had attracted the boy's attention. His mother had said he would learn all about it when he went to school, and studied geography. Little Kitty was presently very busily engaged in dressing and undressing her doll, which occupation, in its oft-repeated ardoll, which occupation, in its oft-repeated arrangements, disarrangements, and re-arrangements, appeared to absorb her entire attention. The next day, Kitty, being alone with her mother, suddenly looked up from her doll tending with the serious question, 'Moder, what do dey study in school besides jography?' Grammar, said her mother; when she was interrupted by the child exclaiming, in a tone of surprise, 'Do dey b—study gran ma! and do dey study gran'pa too?'

of surprise, 'Do dey b-study gran ma! and do dey study gran'pa too?'

"Charlie B-, a little boy about five years old, whose parents were going on a journey, was told by his mother 'to be a good boy,' and pray for his father, his mother, and his little brother Freddy. Seeing him hesitate, she said, 'Won't you, Charlie?' 'Y-e-s, m-a-a-m,' was the low reply, 'but I don't believe it will pay to pray for Fred, he's so little!' He had heard his father use that phrase, and had remembered it 'but too well.'

'but too well.' "Little Charlie had been taught by a pious "Little Charlie had been taught by a pious mother the necessity of nightly prayer, but his little heart has taught him an improvement on the original plan. Charlie was tumbling into bed one night as soon as his tunic and pantaletts were exchanged for his small white night dress. "My little boy must kneel by me, and thank his heavenly Father for His care of him, and the part of the property of the part o said his mother as she took his hand. 'Oh, no,' says Charlle, looking joyfully into her face, 'I s'ant have to say my prayers for eight days: I said 'em over eight times before I went to bed last night."

"Little Fannie is a great lover of nature, and is never so much delighted as when among the flowers which are so common in our southern land, or gazing at night on the moon or stars. A short time since she was looking at the full moon while in her father's arms, and was told that God was in the moon. A few days after she was passing a church with her mother, when her curiosity was cited, and she asked whose house that was. 'That's God's house, my darling,' said her mother. 'And does Dod come out of the moon to live in it, mamma?' she

"On another occasion her mother took her to church. It was her first visit, and she was told that, as they were going to God's house, she must be very quiet. She sat still for a long time, but seemed constantly expecting some one. At length she said, in a low voice, 'Mam-

one. At length she said, in a low voice, 'Mainma, where is Dod? I don't see him.'

"A friend of ours has a little boy of great activity, aged three years. He proposed to take him into the country recently, and a day was fixed for his departure. The youngster was greatly delighted with his prospect, and earnestly longed for the day to come. It came, but brought a severe August rain with it. The disconnections was keen and grew more hit. disappointment was keen, and grew more bitter constantly, as the weary hours of two dismally rainy days went by. The little fellow could stand it no longer. He first cried the rain powred down. Then he changed his tacties and tried the efficacy of prayer, for his mother saw him at the door, looking steadily into the heavens amid the copious shower, ar overheard him saying:
"'Dod! Dod! Don't let any more come down;

'queese it up dry; 'queese it up dry with a towel; don't let any more come down.'

"This is not an anecdote, it is a fact. The best of it was, that the prayer was immediately answered. The rain held up, it was squeezed up dry, and the little boy's happiness was complete."

OUR BATTLE FIELDS.—We make the follow-ing extract from Gov. Seymour's address, at the laying of the foundation of the monument on "the Andre Ground:" "In no period during the revolutionary contest was our State exempt from the evils of war. The highlands on the Hudson constituted the strongholds of the American army. While other portions of our country were occasionally invaded, here the contest was unceasing. The British government at all times saw that the full possession of the valley of the Hudson, on their part, would divide and weaken the power of the colonists, and would destroy all hopes of their maintaining the freedom of our country. The greatest effort put forth by England was confined in its operations to our own territories, and she selected for the march of her combining armies the same avenue through which bining armies the same avenue through which commerce now pours its full tide, where the savage made his war path, and where she had struggled with her ancient foe during the French war. New York was invaded simultaneously through the valley of the Upper Hudson by her disciplined troops under Burgoyne, by her fleets ascending the river, under Clinton, and by her savage allies under Saint Leger, who were to exert all their forms of warfare, and to combine their strength at the present capital were to exert all their forms of warfare, and to combine their strength at the present capital of our State; thus to separate the New England States from the rest of the colonies, and then to destroy the divided and weakened forces of the American armies. We then saw the remarkable spectacle of savage warfare, disciplined armies, and a naval power, all exerted at once upon our State. The brave and hardy settler on the Mohawk encountered, on the bat-tle ground of Oriskany, the fierce savage under Brandt, the still more cruel tory under the ruth less Butler, and the disciplined soldiers of Saint Leger; and in the deep forests the bloodiest and fiercest contests of the revolution occurred. Animated on the one hand by patriotic cour-Animated on the one hand by patriotic courage, and on the other by a fierce batred of those who had driven them from their homes, the settler, the savage, and the tory engaged in a contest hand to hand, and in many instances perished in each other's dying grasp. The effect of this bloody contest was the abandonment of the investiture of Fort Stanwix by the force under Saint Leger. "Thus one part of this great and combined movement was defeated by the hardy settlers upon the Mohawk, and the first check was given to this alarming exertion of British power against the liberties of our country. And yet no monument marks the spot where this important contest occurred, and little is known by our people of its details. There are but few our people of its details. There are but few who can point out the spot moistened by the blood of Herkimer, and whitened by the unburied bones of savage and civilized combatants; and the traveler through the gentle and beautiful valley of the Mohawk is nowhere reminded that re the Mohawk is nowhere reminded that its whole length has been traversed by the horrors of Indian warfare, and that its early settlements, during the whole period of the revolutionary contest, were devastated by tomahawk and torch."
